PREFACE.

THE present Dictionary of Quotations is a reprint of the latest edition of Colonel P H Dalbiac's work The Author Index has been omitted, and the additions which appeared as a supplement in the last edition have been incorporated in the text, which, at the same time, has been carefully revised. A Dictionary of Quotations is intended to meet In the first place, it should give a key two requirements. to the origin of well-known extracts These are arranged alphabetically according to the words with which the quotation usually begins In the second place, such a book should furnish a number of apposite quotations on different subjects. It is hoped that the Subject Index in this volume will enable any reader to provide himself with the extracts he may desire

Byron. Domestic Pieces, Fare thee well.

Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness! This is the state of man: To-day he puts forth The tender leaves of hope; to-morrow blossoms, And bears his blushing honours thick upon him; The third day comes a frost, a killing frost, And-when he thinks, good easy man, full sure His greatness is a-ripening—nips his root, And then he falls as I do I have ventur'd Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders, This many summers in a sea of glory; But far beyond my depth. my high-blown pride At length broke under me; and now has left me, Weary and old with service, to the mercy Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye: I feel my heart new open'd O how wretched Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours i There is betwixt that smile we would aspire to, That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin, More pangs and fears than wars or women have; And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, Never to hope again

Shakespeare Henry VIII. (Wolsey), Act III. Sc II. Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, th' ear-piercing fife,

In some circumstances, to die is to live.—ARCHBP. THLOTSON Letter to Lady Russell, 21st November 1685.

In sooth, I know not why I am so sad; It wearies me; you say it wearies you; But how I caught it, found it, or came by it, What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born, I am to learn; And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,

That I have much ado to know myself.

SHAKESPEARE. The Merchant of Venice (Antonio). Act I. Sc. I

In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice:
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: but 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling,—there the action hes
In his true nature; and we ourselves compelled,
Even to the teeth and foreheads of our faults,
To give in evidence.

Aloof from the entire point.

SHAKESPEARE King Lear (King of France), Act I., Sc. I.

Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O no! it is an ever fixed mark,
That looks on tempests, and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken
SHAKESPEARE Somet CXVI.

Love is not much unlike ambition;
For in them both all lets must be remov'd
"Twixt every crown and him that would aspire;
And he that will attempt to win the same
Must plunge up to the depth o'er head and ears,
And hazard drowning in the purple sea:
So he that loves must needs through blood and fire,
And do all things to compass his desire.

Vide- Come, sleep '

Sleep, Nurse of our life, care's best reposer, Nature's high'st rapture, and the vision giver.

LORD HERBERT OF CHERBURY To his Mistress,

for her True Picture.

(O) sleep, O gentle sleep, Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down, And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber, Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great. Under the canopies of costly state,

And Inll'd with sounds of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch A watch-case or a common 'larum-bell ? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains In cradle of the rude imperious surge. And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With deafening clamour in the slippery shrouds, That, with the hurly, death itself awakes ?-Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude: And in the calmest and most stillest night. With all appliances, and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, he down! Uneasy has the head that wears a crown. SHAKESPEARE

The quality of mercy is not strain'd ; It droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd. It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes: Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes The throned monarch better than his crown: His sceptre shows the force of temporal power, The attribute to awe and majesty, Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings; But mercy is above the sceptred sway, It is enthroned in the hearts of kings, It is an attribute to God himself; And earthly power doth then show likest God's. When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew, Though justice be thy plea, consider this,— That in the course of justice, none of us Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy; And that same prayer doth teach us all to render The deeds of mercy.

SHAKESPEARE The Merchant of Venuce (Portia), Act IV., Sc. I.

To be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.—Shakespeare. Hamlet (Hamlet), Act II., Sc. II.

To be or not to be,—that is the question—Whether 'tas nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To dic—to sleep—
No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is herr to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To die—to sleep,—

To sleep! perchance to dream; ay, there's the rub; For in that sleep of death what dreams may come. When we have shuffled off this mortal coil, Must give us pause: there's the respect That makes calamity of so long life; For who would bear the whips and scorns of time, Th' oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely, The pangs of despised love, the law's delay. The insolence of office, and the spurns That patient ment of the unworthy takes. When he himself might his quietus make With a bare bodkin? Who would fardels bear, To grunt and sweat under a weary life, But that the dread of something after death. The undiscovered country, from whose bourn No traveller returns,—puzzles the will. And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of? Thus, conscience does make cowards of us all: And thus the native hue of resolution Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought; And enterprises of great pith and moment, With this regard their currents turn awry, And lose the name of action —Soft you now! The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons Be all my sins remember'd.

Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
'To monarchise, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,—
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and humour'd thus,
'Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle-wall, and—farewell, king!

350 WOMAN! THE PRIDE—WOMAN'S LOVE.

Woman! the pride and happiness of man,
Without whose soft endearments Nature's plan
Had been a blank, and life not worth a thought;
Woman! by all the Loves and Graces taught,
With softest arts, and sure tho' hidden skill,
To humanize and mould us to her will;
Woman! with more than common grace form'd here
With the persuasive language of a tear
To melt the rugged temper of our isle,
Or win us to her purpose with a smile:
Woman! by fate the quickest spur decreed,
The fairest, best reward of every deed,
Which bears the stamp of honour.
CHURCHILL. The Times, line 301.
